

Master Gardener Volunteer General Training

Welcome to the Master Gardener Volunteer Program!

The Walworth County Master Gardener Volunteer program is specifically designed through the University of Wisconsin to train people in all areas of horticulture to assist the University of Wisconsin-Extension educators.

This training program will provide a strong foundation in which participants can continuously build upon and bring their knowledge into the communities through volunteer projects.

The classes are designed for everyone. Whether you are a beginner gardener or an experienced gardener there is always something new to learn! We will break down the fundamentals of horticulture and use them as our building blocks. You will learn the how's and why's of plant growth, plant ecosystems, and environmental impacts. From soil quality to backyard wildlife there are fun and interesting facts that will amaze you.

Master Gardener Volunteers operate under UW-Extension organizational policies in delivering information to the public.
